David Stump offers some additional data concerning the "INUTILIZADO" Perfin on Argentine stamps covered in the article by Mike Burrows in the November-December issue. Dave says these 20-peso stamps were perforated five stamps at once in a horizontal row; that usually they were "strengthened" by a horizontal line being hand drawn across the sheet on each row of stamps; and that they were not only used to pay postage for newspapers, but also for receipts for other post office business, including the rental of post office boxes.
